Under the designation "New Economy in the Field of Shipbuilding", preparations for structural changes at the Warnow Shipyard in Warnemuende were under way. The reorganized shipyard will later serve as pattern for similar changes to be introduced at all large enterprises in the Soviet Zone of Germany. These changes will mainly result in a merger of individual working fields in order to save personnel. Upon completion of the reorganization at the Warnow-Shipyard in Warnemuende 400 technicians will be given notice. The number of other workers to be discharged could not yet be determined. Most of the technicians to be discharged had previously been employed in the aircraft industry and started in the shipbuilding industry only in 1945. It appears that all these measures have the aim of making workers available for other fields of production (aircraft industry) etc. for the armed forces. Large-scale discharges of personnel were allegedly to be launched in other large enterprises in the Soviet Zone of Germany which will not be connected with structural changes.
